

Mini budget in a nutshell

The state now has drastically reduced room to boost spending on key priorities, warns Mboweni.

Eskom debt relief on hold

Eskom's turnaround strategy needs to move ahead before further funds can be released.

Party nearly over for millionaire civil servants

Cabinet members and other politicians may face salary cuts.

Loading...

Putin woos Ramaphosa and other African leaders as he warns against Western 'blackmail'

Oct 23 2019 07:55 Henry Meyer

Bloomberg
NEWS

After restoring Russia as a key power in the Middle East, President Vladimir Putin is turning his attention to Africa to raise Moscow's profile in the struggle for geopolitical influence.

Putin hosts leaders from more than 50 African states on Wednesday in Russia's first conference with the continent, underlining a Kremlin push to rival the US, the European Union and China as strategic players in the resource-rich region.

"Russia is increasingly looking to Africa as a region where it can project power and influence," said Paul Stronski of the Washington-based Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. "The power vacuums created by a lack of Western policy focus in recent years" are giving it "an opportunity to curry favour."

The two-day summit in Sochi co-hosted with Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah El-Sisi, the current African Union chairman, is an effort to revive former Cold War relations, when African regimes often allied with Moscow in the ideological contest with the US before the Soviet Union's collapse. It's "an unprecedented, benchmark event," Putin told the state-run Tass news service in an interview published Monday, calling stronger links with Africa "one of Russia's foreign policy priorities."

Still, there's a sense Russia is coming late to the continent after China and other states including Turkey and the United Arab Emirates filled a vacuum left by the erosion of Communist-era ties. Russia's $20 billion trade volume with Africa in 2018 was dwarfed by the EU's 300 billion euros ($334 billion) and China's $204 billion, and was about a third of the US's total.

Moscow's "influence will grow but it will be incremental rather than exponential," said Ronak Gopaldas, director at Signal Risk in South Africa, a risk-management firm. "I don't think they'll come anywhere close to matching Chinese influence in Africa."

Renewed focus

As in the Middle East, where Putin leveraged his successful Syria intervention to bolster Russia's standing at the US's expense, the Kremlin is exploiting Washington's fading influence even as US President Donald Trump's new Prosper Africa strategy seeks to reverse the decline.

While it's never been entirely absent from Africa, the Kremlin's renewed focus has largely involved a two-pronged strategy so far, shoring up unstable regimes through informal military contractors while offering defense and energy cooperation to other states.

Russia signalled its capabilities by sending two Tu-160 'Blackjack' strategic nuclear bombers that were due to arrive in South Africa on Wednesday, the first time they will have landed on the continent.

"We are ready to engage in competition for cooperation with Africa," Putin said in his interview. "We

Russian President Vladimir Putin. (AFP)

RELATED ARTICLES

- Mills Soko: How Russia's pursuit of African allies will test the continent
- Govt not seeking help from Russia to build new small nuclear power stations - Mantashe
- Mozambique, Russia sign energy, security deals
- Trump's oil sanctions leave Russian exporters $1bn richer

MOST READ

EDITOR'S CHOICE

- Mboweni's medium-term budget in a nutshell
- Party almost over for government's 29 000 millionaires, Mboweni warns
- South Africa could be 'junk' by Friday - Investec
- Tweeto no more: Mboweni breaks up with 'abusive' Twitter
- NHI budget plans 'no longer affordable' - Treasury

COMPANY SNAPSHOT

see a number of Western states resorting to pressure, intimidation and blackmail” in attempts to regain “lost influence and dominant positions in former colonies.”

Russia, which has written off $20 billion of African debts, plans to offer financing to states with little access to capital markets. It has also inked defence-cooperation accords in recent years with about 15 African nations. State atomic energy operator Rosatom Corp., meanwhile, is seeking contracts across the continent including in Uganda, Kenya, Nigeria and Zambia. Still, Russia can't match China's financial firepower. Chinese President Xi Jinping last year announced $60 billion in loans and other financing at a Beijing conference with African nations, three years after pledging a similar amount.

'Niche Player'

“Russia is now a niche player and its playing in the energy arena and security area,” said Steven Gruzd, head of the South African Institute of International Affairs' Governance and Diplomacy Program in Johannesburg. It hopes offering African nations closer economic and political ties “will get it more support in forums like the United Nations,” he said.

Putin showed his potential last year when the UN issued a waiver for Russia to arm and defend the government of the Central African Republic, which sought help after its former colonial master, France, ended a three-year peacekeeping mission.

Even so, he's faced setbacks. President Cyril Ramaphosa froze a R1 trillion nuclear power project with Russia after he took office last year. Protests against longtime Sudanese leader Omar al-Bashir, who enjoyed Kremlin backing despite an international arrest warrant against him for alleged genocide, led the military to oust him in April and share power with the civilian opposition.

The Wagner mercenary group of Putin ally Yevgeny Prigozhin, which has been fighting in Syria, is offering security services in Sudan and the CAR in exchange for gold and diamond concessions. It's active in other mineral-rich African countries including the Democratic Republic of Congo, and is present in Libya in support of military leader Khalifa Haftar, who's battling the UN-backed government in Tripoli.

Influence, Money

Prigozhin deployed political consultants to try to influence elections in Zimbabwe and Madagascar. Russia is backing President Alpha Conde's attempt to prolong his rule next year by scrapping term limits in Guinea, the biggest supplier of bauxite for Russian aluminum giant United Co. Rusal.

Another wealthy Putin ally, Konstantin Malofeev, helped set up the International Sovereign Development Agency this year, which is a general partner at the summit. The agency says it's in negotiations with several central and western African countries and plans to issue $500 million in sovereign debt to one of them in early 2020, though it won't say which one.

“Real sovereignty begins with economic sovereignty,” Malofeev said. “A lot of the financing received by African countries is granted on unfavorable conditions.”

Russia has “grand designs to be a global superpower again” and knows it can't ignore Africa as “a new geopolitical chessboard,” said Gopaldas at Signal Risk. “For African policy makers, it creates more choice,” he said.

Paid Content

South Africa - Don't Buy CBD Oil Until You Read This.

Amazing News Online

New Groundbreaking Technology Makes Landlines Obsolete - Get Deals

VoIP | Sponsored Listings

Want a Canadian citizenship? Free eligible check!

www.canadaims.com

#MINIBUDGET2019

Struggling power utility Eskom will take centre stage at this year's mini budget

Related links:
SA may lose Moody's stable outlook.
'You can't have everything at the same time' – Mboweni looks back at a year in office

Ciaz

SAVE R17 000
FROM R199 900

SUZUKI Way of Life

FREE ADDITIONAL R20 000 EXCLUSIVE TO THORP

CLICK HERE FOR MORE INFO

THORPSUZUKL.CO.ZA THORP TABLE VIEW

RMB Real Estate Investment Banking: a large-scale partner in a

RMB is proud to have been chosen to partner with Accelerate in the redevelopment of the Fourways...

ADVERTORIAL

RMB Real Estate Investment Banking: a large-scale partner in a

RMB is proud to have been chosen to partner with Accelerate in the redevelopment of the Fourways

ADVERTORIAL

RMB Real Estate Investment Banking: a large-scale partner in a

[Gallery] Paparazzi Couldn't Look Away, Her Gown Was Something No One Has Seen
Pens & Patron

The Smartest Dog Breeds Ranked
Family Minded

Finally! South Africans Get Super Cheap Car Insurance Deals
MzansiReview

FOLLOW FIN24

MONEY CLINIC

- Authority raids KZN forex businesses
- PE forex trader gets 15 years in jail for stealing R23m
- Generation handout? No way, say millennials, as survey shows they are super savers
- Afrikaans comic found guilty of theft, must repay Old Mutual R1.8m
- SA salary growth hits record low

Do you have a question about your finances? We'll get an expert opinion.

Click here...

VOTING BOOTH

What do you think about private healthcare in SA?

- NHI can't come fast enough
- I don't use private healthcare
- I am happy with my provider(s)
- Let's hope the Health Market Inquiry leads to reforms

Vote

Results

Previous results · Suggest a vote

More From fin24

Minister rejects plan for giant coal mine in Gauteng

WATCH: The electoral battle for Brexit and Britain begins

Afrikaans comic found guilty of theft, must...

Markus Jooste's mass art sale triggers Pierneef...

Eskom privatisation is 'fake news' - Gordhan

Paid Content

South Africa - Don't Buy CBD Oil Until You Read This.
Amazing News Online

World's Safest Airlines, Ranked
Far and Wide

More From fin24

More SA super rich trying to secure international education for their

WATCH: US-China deal may not be ready to sign, says a source

New buyer of Gupta mine after finance flop

Absa sells Edgars store cards to RCS

Ramaphosa's waiting game wears thin in corporate South Africa

MTN Nigeria now has 61.6m subscribers, revenue up 12%

Sasol CEOs forced to quit after US fiasco

Brexit update: EU agrees to extension as UK election looms

SHARE THIS PAGE

 Yahoo!  Digg  del.icio.us  Facebook

SERVICES

Money Clinic

Get your financial questions answered.

Press Code

We subscribe to the Press Code.

Newsletters

You choose what you want.

Contact us

Lost? Confused? Problems? Let us help you.

24.com

Data supplied by:

RSS feeds | Terms & Conditions | Advertise on Fin24 | Press Code | About us | Contact us

iab.
south africa